Chapter 1 by Gounaitory

Its not easy "to turn back" to your previous life after so many things happened to you. But the main thing is not losing yourself after all...

Chapter 2 by intellikat

I had been, and in some ways always will be, a high school Math teacher. And yes, I had done some horrible things. Some things I am ashamed of. Some things I'm afraid to admit. But I did it all in the name of progressive education.

Chapter 3 by Gounaitory

I went to jail in 1981, I was accused in homicide I never ever did

Chapter 4 by Luke Meyers

It's ironic, really, considering all the actual blood on my hands. Nobody ever had any clue that I

Of course, there are no perfect plans; my success was my own undoing. On my watch, with everything humming along as well as I ever wanted it, preparing students for the modern world in exciting new ways, something horrible started happening.

Chapter 5 by intellikat

A young teacher, fresh out of university with a crisp teaching degree in hand started to garner a following at my school. At MY school. Looking back now, from behind these greasy bars, I wish I could dial back the pride coursing through my being at the time, but I could not. I began to hate her. She was my best teacher, mind you. So many parents loved her. Her students adored her. More so, however, than they did me. I could not abide it any longer. And because I could accept her, I would have to kill her.

Chapter 6 by Ope Lle (yt)JK

The murder was quite easy but, she had a relative that worked with the FBI and they had the money and resources to have the investigation last more than a year. The pressure from the constant investigations and the questioning was too much pressure for me take an I cracked. What a fool I was, I should have known, I shouldn't have murdered her it was way too easy.
